Scope and Content Note

The Louis Raemaekers collection, acquired in 1944, contains correspondence, writings, newspaper issues, clippings, photographs, and over 1,000 original drawings, consisting mostly of the biting satirical cartoons that made the Dutch artist famous worldwide.

Raemaekers joined the Amsterdam Telegraaf as a political cartoonist and caricaturist in 1907, but with the outbreak of World War I ceased all other professional activity to dedicate himself to an anti-German campaign through his cartoons. He was charged in the Dutch courts for violating the neutrality of Holland, but his work found an appreciative audience in London where it was exhibited in 1915. During the war he made frequent visits to the French front, charcoal in hand. In 1917, he toured the United States and drew cartoons for various newspapers. The inter-war period found him living in Belgium and campaigning in favor of the League of Nations and against the rising tide of Nazism. He eventually emigrated to the United States and continued his artistic career by drawing cartoons for the New York Herald Tribune and the afternoon tabloid PM

Among the papers is an extensive correspondence series, which reflects Raemaekers' activism and contacts with many heads of state, ministers, government agencies, relief organizations, and veterans' associations. Also noteworthy are scrapbooks of clippings relating to Raemaekers' life and work. The speeches and writings series is very small, but does contain some interesting letters to the editor and the speech he delivered before the Lord Mayor of London in 1919.

In 2001, thanks to the generous support of the Mericos Foundation, Raemaekers' artwork was re-housed and preservation treatment provided with the assistance of the staff of the Fine Arts Museums of San Francisco. The drawings can now be safely used for research. The re-housing effort uncovered many titles previously hidden by matting, and those were incorporated into a revised and expanded register.

Raemaekers' handwriting is often difficult to decipher, so the titles given in the finding aid may not always exactly correspond to those on his artwork. In addition, minor grammar and spelling mistakes were corrected.

Ariane de Ranitz, who had researched the Raemaekers collection at the Hoover Institution Archives to write her book, Met een pen en een potlood als wapen (with a pen and a pencil as weapons), assisted the Archives staff with Dutch language titles.
